Northeastern University

London, UK

The new 38,000 square-foot campus of Northeastern University is spread over two floors of a mixed-used building on St. Katharine Docks—a location on the Thames River waterfront in London.

The new and much larger location offers flexible, open plan space that will be used for teaching and learning, and will also house administrative offices.

Pullman Chairs with upholstered swivelling plinths and tablet arms have been used throughout, to create private areas that students and teachers alike, can go and use when focussing or taking a call.
